Solution

We Will Design And Deliver A Custom Designed Solution Centred Around Your Training Needs And Requirements.

We offer a comprehensive service whereby you are able to discuss your training requirements with a dedicated training expert who has the knowledge and the experience to design a custom made event that will completely meet your needs and objectives.

We also offer a variety of pre-course assessments about the specific training requirements of your delegates, as well as post-course resources and evaluations covering what they have taken away from the training as well as gathering feedback about their training experience.

Most organisations are under pressure to determine the effectiveness of their training events and we are positive that your company is not an exception; therefore we offer a range of tools and assessments, including a 360° in-house evaluation system that will enable you to answer the question “Did the training work?”

Top 5 Benefits of In-House Training

1. Cost-efficient: if you need to train a group of employees, in-house training can often save you money as compared with external training courses.
2. Customized content: with in-house training you can work through your own case studies and address specific training and business needs.
3. Convenience: running a course in-house means that you can choose a time, location and pace to suit you and your colleagues, saving you both time and money.
4. Specially selected trainer: you can choose the trainer most suited to your training needs, so that you get the most out of the course.
5. Consistent quality: employees may prefer learning with their colleagues, and training all of your staff together also means that you can be sure of the consistency of their learning and development.

Gallup's 2013 State of the Workplace Report indicates that in Sub-Saharan Africa just 10% of employees are actively committed to doing a good job, 57% merely put their time in while 33% act out their discontent in counterproductive ways, negatively influencing their coworkers, missing days on the job, and driving customers away through poor service. This 33% group alone costs the South African economy Billions a year. Whilst this pattern is present all over the globe, the figures in Sub-Saharan Africa stand out. There is no reason why they should. There is no reason why organisations should not reach high levels of productivity and engagement.

We at Dynamic Eagle Training and Networking are committed to contributing positively towards the improvement of employee's productivity at all corporate levels, by providing bespoke team building activities that will accommodate any motivational outcome.
